Rancho la Paz
– a little white town in the mountains of Mijas and the home of more than 100 Andalusia horses

In the south of Andalusia, between Malaga and Marbella, in the mountains of Mijas with views over Fuengirola and the Costa del Sol you find La Paz.

An independent little white town has grown up here during the years: 27 rustic typical Andalusian apartments are distributed all over the ranch, a swimming pool invites to refresh in summer, an Andalusian patio surrounded with bougainvillea invites to common meals and a chimney salon to canny evenings in winter – all framed with the spacious corals.

The rustic apartments are all in Andalusia style furnished and with own bathroom with shower. You can book single, double or triple rooms. Part of them with air-conditions to cool down in summer and warm up in winter. Towels and bedclothes as the daily cleaning are included in the service.

Between palms and oleander the swimming pool invites to refresh during the “Spanish siesta” in summer. For the pool or a visit at the beach you should bring some own towels. On the roofed over terrace in between lots of flowers you have your meals and spend time together in the evenings. For the colder wintertime you have a salon with a small library corner to relax. Here you also find a TV, a small library and internet connection for free on your disposal. But at La Paz everything moves around the horses as about 100 of them in all ages mention it their home. Most of them are born here and grown up in the spacious corals in herds, waiting to show you their homeland and typical marks – nobles, hardness and safety.

The tract with the boxes for the youngsters, which are in training, surrounds the patio where the trail horses get prepared for the rides. Here you get to know “your” horse, clean it before riding and shower it after. The guides always saddle the horses.

At La Paz you live in between the horses – you wake up with a snicker and fall asleep with a snuffle from the corals. In a relaxed moment you can observe the young foals with their mums, the youngsters playing and the riding horses spooning with the others. Surely you fall in love with the youngsters that are on the first training.

The ranch is a bit outside situated, away from the trouble of the Costa del Sol. You can walk up (about 40 minutes) to the town of Mijas, famous because the donkey taxi and with lots of small alleyways with typical handwork shops and bars with snacks and drinks.

To the beach of Fuengirola we offer transfers (with a small fee).

For sight seeing trips (see “Andalusia”) we recommend a rent a car (bring your driving license) – you often find very good offers by your flight booking.

If you do not want to drive yourself there is a bus and train station in Torreblanca / Fuengirola
